Image of the day

The faces of 3,500 people who have been helped by the Royal British Legion form a giant poppy created by artist Helen Marshall at Victoria station in London for the launch of Poppy Support, an initiative to promote the Legion's work

"People see and wear the poppy with pride as a symbol of Remembrance. It should also be a symbol of hope to people who need financial, social and emotional support now"

IAN TOWNSEND, LEGION DIRECTOR-GENERAL
